"If the assailants fired on Amin, they must have been using invisible bullets," Utting told reporters at nearby

Stansted airport on arrival from Uganda.

"I saw him being massaged and he was unhurt."

Utting, detained by Ugandan military forces after he entered Uganda on June 22 without official permission, said he slept on an old mattress and was fed twice a day, mainly a cupful of oil beans and com cake.

The 46-year-old journalist, unshaven and wearing an open-neck blue safari suit, was met by representatives of his newspaper, Toronto Star, and taken to an undis-closed London address.

51% OF VOTERS BACK GRITS-GALLUP POLL

TORONTO (CP) — For the first time since its landslide victory in the 1974 federal election, the Liberal party has edged past the 50-per-cent mark in popularity among Canadian voters, says a Gallup poll released today.

The poll, taken in early June, shows the Liberals are favored by 51 per cent of the voters, a four-point increase over the May poll.

Progressive Conservative support dropped for the sixth month in a row and now is at 27 per cent, down from 32 in May, while the NDP is up one per cent to 18. Four per cent support other parties.

Thirty-one per cent of those polled either refused to answer or said they were undecided.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark said today he would be delighted if Prime Minister Trudeau called a fall election because "no doubt we'd win it."

"I think probably there will be a change in the trend," Clark added.

OTTAWA (OP) - Continuing increases in food prices pushed the cost of living up by a sharp seven-tenths of one per cent during June, Statistics Canada said today.

The federal agency said the 12-month inflation rate accelerated to 7.8 per cent, up from 7.6 per cent a month earlier and the highest inflation rate since June, 1976.

It was the sixth successive month in which food prices have helped push the con-sumer price index higher. The index is the most commonly used measurement of infla tion. About 40 per cent of June's index rise occurred because of a 1.1-per-cent increase in food costs

Higher costs for housing, in-cluding household operation substantial part of the June Statistics Canada says that pork prices were the largest single item in the June food price increases, accounting for about a quarter of the food index rise. But even though pork prices rose 4.7 per cent in the month, they were still below year-ago levels.

Seasonal price rises for fresh fruit, as well as increased prices for coffee, tea, dairy products, bread, soft drinks, and restaurant meals contributed to higher dry cleaning, inter-city bus and train travel and parking. Statistics Canada said the purchasing power of a 1871 dollar had dropped to 62 cents

The government has already had to concede that its goal of holding inflation to six-per-cent in 1977 now is unlikely to be met. Food prices, which become riging showly which began rising sharply last November after a year of relative stability, are the main reason.

The government announced a national food policy last month, after repeated opposition party calls for one. It promised consumers more say in setting prices for farm and fishery products. Howev-er, these objectives must be balanced by fair prices to producers, the government added, and there is no sign of any quick relief for conumers in the new policy. Higher June inflation figures are likely to prompt reved calls to hurry the end of the mandatory wage and price controls program. It an average six per cent this year, but the inflation rate has outstripped that figure in every month so far.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board, preaching the benefits of the old-fashioned virtues of thrift and personal restraint, has started a new $58,000-campaign designed to illuminate ways in which consumers can battle cost-of-living increases.

Board officials say key to the program is a pocket-sized, 35-page booklet entitled Kick the Inflation Habit. The board has had 40,000 English and 10,000 French copies of the booklet printed at a cost of $13,000 for free distribu-nadian prison system "is the biggest con going for spending tax money," Dave Barrett, leader of the B.C. New Demo-cratic Party, said Tuesday.

Barrett told an addictions conference the system pro-vides a home "for the emo-tionally-undernourished" at a cost of $18,000 a year each.

"They get three meals a day, a bed and someone to complain to — the guards," he said. "Jails are stupid, they are psychologically lov-ing mothers. The only people who do life there are the staff - the prisoners get out."

Barrett slammed the federal government for ignoring every major recommendation of the Le Dain inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs.

have a vested interest to pro-tect.

"We all make a living off his (the addict's) body," the former social worker said.

Barrett said U.S. and Cana-dian experience shows that prisons don't cure addicts, and expressed horror at the recent recommendation of a parliamentary committee that a prison centre for the treat-ment of narcotics addicts be built.

He said the director of the U.S. prison narcotics treatment centre in Lexington, Ky., which only had a 1.5 per cent cure rate, reported all the experts at the institution had found was that "narcotics addicts have an insatiable desire for drugs and they like chocolate cake."

Report said he feels raphic

Barrett said he feels public maintenance of heroin addicts is the only solution for this drug addiction problem, until social values change and the need to rebuild family life is recognized.

The RCMP question is not the only one that raises the fear that the essential principle of ministerial responsibility is dying out in Ottawa as members of the government seek to shift blame to any shoulders but their own . The same nattern was evident in some aspects of the Lockheed affair. It has been inescapable in ministerial handling of both the Atomic Energy of Canada and Polysar controversies. principle itself, however, is so fundamental to our system of government that the trend is alarming.

Cloud of Naivete

Solicitor-General Francis Fox made the present inquiry inevitable by his previous handling of the issue in the House of Commons. He attempted to skate past a serious problem area under a cloud of naivete with the result that the security service which the government quite properly maintains was left hanging without support or defence. It was impossible to avoid the impression that Fox was trying hard to pin blame on two retired officers, former commissioner W. L. Higthe security service.

Since the RCMP was being left on its own, it was no great wonder that the present commissioner, Maurice Nadon pushed onto the government the informa-tion — always available to minister on request — which brought about the inquiry. It had become his only means of protecting and clarifying the position of the force which he heads.

The great weakness in the govern-ment's position is that while the security service exists and has operated on its in-struction and behalf, it has been so reluctant to accept responsibility for the way in which it has gone about its work. If Fox and his predecessors have been as naive as they ask the country to believe, then the corollary is that they have not approached seriousness. I suggest that ministers have acquiesced in being kept in the dark about some aspects of security operations—that the guiding principle has been over the years: "Do what you must but don't tell me anything embarrassing. Fox has spent a long time insisting that the bungled and illegal Montreal raid was an isolated event. Now according to the licitor-general. Commissioner states that some members of the service have been involved in actions which were neither authorized nor provided for by law." As the minister responsible, Fox had a duty to find out that very point from per before he spoke so

It seems evident that, as the inquiry gets under way, the RCMP and the ministers who have had responsibility will approach each other from adversary positions. The commissioner and his officers certainly will not want to see the RCMP bear the entire blame for operations con-ducted on the government's behalf and, in the details, with the acquiescence if not ac-tual consent of ministers. The ministers, it is predictable on this government's form alone, will seek to shift any blame onto the shoulders of other men. In that situation lies the commission's best chance at arriv-to sound conclusions about the future control and ultimate responsibility for the security service. It is clear that much more precision is required in the ultimate political control of the service's methods of operation words "breaking and entering" should not be thrown around too loosely in this connection because that offence requires a criminal intention. Common sense suggests that the much lesser offence of trespass would have been more likely. among what are now referred to as "methods ... which were neither authorized nor provided for by law." Probably the best part of Fox's statement uncing the new royal commission is

In a democratic society such as ours, the policies and procedures which govern the activities of the security service must conform with the rule of law. At the same time, the rule of law must be responsible to the requirements of our national security. The rule of law and the requirements of national security constitute two facets of one unique reality which have countries with firm democratic

Japanese Red Army

In a world where, among other things international terrorism is a constant problem, services such as this one remain ential and common sense dictates that, while they must be properly controlled in their operations, they also must be effec-tive. Not long ago, a cabinet minister, without imposing any confidentiality on the statement, told me that within a fairly recent period members of the Japanes Red Army faction had on two occasion identified in Canada. That is the deadly terrorist group that carried out the Lod massacre in Tel Aviv and has taken part in other murderous operations. The minister would not say what had followed discovery of its members in Canada but it is evident what should have happened and what probably did.

lintensive surveillance operation would have been required since to dis-cover why they were here would have been far more important than expelling them. If trespass is to be avoided in such situations, it follows that quite considerable legal power will be necessary. And that brings us back to the starting point: such power must be carefully controlled and ultimate responsibility for its use must rest on a minister of the crown and his co agues in the cabinet.

Fine Political Line

JUST BROWSING ...

SAFFRON WALDEN, England -Defeat is such a friend that the British Labor government clings to power on it.

The government lost another one here on Thursday, in a byelection conceded, even before the voting, to the Conservatives. What was in doubt was second

Also before the voting, a high source let it be known that the government expected to remain in power on the very issue that the election would automatically turn over the country to Margaret Thatcher and her

This is going to be the big argument presented soon to the trade unions, some of which have been threatening to sabotage the government's econômic program, and thus the government itself. A remarkable opinion poll, also taken before the voting at this largelyagricultural riding in neat, well-scrubbed Essex, claimed that 68 per cent of the voters wanted a general election now.

Opinion Poll

Not surprising, muttered the source, because the Tories ought to be able to count that many voters in Saffron Walden. a riding they have held since the 1920s when it was a Liberal stronghold. If the Tory vote isn't any more than this, the source suggested, the government would be pretty happy about it.

It is, of course the Tories and their press who have been whipping up the idea of a general election this year. But the government is determined to stay in power at least until the fall of 1978, when it hopes that economic conditions, unless completely sabotaged, will be favorable again. The Liberal party, which is propping up the government with its 13 parliamentary seats, also wants to wait. Although every now and then Liberal leader David Steel feels compelled to threaten to break off the Lib-Lab pact, as it is known, he has several times, seemingly inadvertently, referred to "the next election in the two years" and "the autumn of 1978." Steel's long-range strategy is to regain for the Liberals their Shangri-la, the political centre between extremes of Labor and the Conservatives, both of which, he hopes, will have sufficiently frightened or antagonized the electorate.

At the moment, Steel talks of the Labor government's mildness in adopting Liberal policy as the price for power. But he believes that Labor is really moving

"quite considerably to the left."
"I think the opportunity for the Liberals to come in and occupy the centre ground of politics is very substantial, especially at a time when it seems to me the Conservative party is moving to the right," said Steel.

Well, it might, indeed, prove to be the Lost Horizon. But that's his story.

Steel has given the government considerable latitude in a broad-brushed program of conditions for his support. Saffron Walden, he says, as do the Laborites, means very little in the grander scheme of things, namely government

"It would be a pretty poor political party that decided, despite the fact that what it was doing was right, that it was proving politically unpopular and therefore change its course," said Steel. He had to concede that the government is unpopular and that the Liberal support of the government is unpopular. But is a far, far better thing . . . etcetera.

"It takes some time before you can get across what is a very novel constitutional concept," he added, (that being the pact). Steel might live up to his name if the government completely fails to curb the lust of some unions for large pay increases. A third phase in governmental economic policy, replacing the under-standing with the unions that expires next month, is a "precondition of support," the Liberal leader bravely says.

But he waffles again on just what phase three ought to be and just how badly the government must fail before Liberal upport is withdrawn. "It is for the government to secure an agreement, then the Liberals will decide," Steel said. 'We're not going to start throwing percen-

Nor is the government, until its meeting with the Trades Union Council this week. It is expected, however, that the government will seek a milder, less-precise agreement with the TUC, assuming that the TUC feels it still has a mandate to negotiate economic restraint.

Rank and File

ion conferences voting for schemes that would repudiate the "social contract."

The government is betting that the TUC will think it does have a mandate, from the union rank and file rather than "active militants who are delegates to con-" a phrase actually used by a high official.

It is also betting that the TUC, and its members, will accept the argument that defeat is unthinkable, because whatever they want - i.e. wages - it should not be at the cost of their Labor government be ing thrown out and replaced by the Conservatives. The Conservatives, the argument continues, would automatically popularize industrial relations.

If necessary, though, the government may be prepared to act tough. The question is who will it pick on — the managers or the wage earners — if it feels forced to order "stabilization" no matter who complains, to avoid the ultimate in defeatism

Neutron Bombs

We have recently been informed that the military men now have neutron bombs which can destroy people — they say? — but not buildings, etc. How nice for the bricks and mortar! But, as per usual for this type of information release, some very important information has been pushed to one side and forgotten, and no one seems to be taking it into account

Neutron bombardment not only kills people' it also produces large amou radioactive isotopes. When special radioactive drugs 'are required, material is inserted into the neutron flux field of a reactor of pile and left there for a while. Upon removal, it is radioactive. A neutron bomb, creating a strong enough of flux to kill people surely will also create quite a lot of long-lasting radioactive topes in the buildings which they do not destroy, thereby saving the buildings from apparent damage, but making them com-pletely uninhabitable thereafter for several hundred years. The carbon in steel would become radioactive for hundreds of years; similarily, other metals would re tain radioactivity for long periods. Water wouldn's be bad for it has a half life of only about four days, but wood and many other building materials contain carbon, so saying that the buildings wouldn't be damaged doesn't seem right.—Ken Branegan, 319

Ultimate Shame

If C.J. (June 25) is so worried about abortion becoming a nasty business because of those who are trying to dictate respect for fetal life, why isn't she con-cerned about the ultimate shame — the killing of our unborn children?

I suggest she look again at the picture of the babies in the garbage bag (Pro-Life pamphlet) and ask herself the question stated below the photo: "Who imposed their morality on these little ones?"

that individuals ought to have the right to choose what is "healthy for themselves" (i.e. abortion) becomes ludicrous when one observes these very dead babies forced into a position of extreme ill health by the wishes of their mothers. Until this time in our western culture, (with the exception of Hitler's Germany), all those who have been in doubt have given defenceless, voiceless human beings the benefit of that doubt. Now, our feminist doubter says we can kill unborn babies because they are a by-product of our sex-oriented society and because it is her choice to do so. May God have mercy on us all if this death sentence is silently accepted by our nation.

Unlike your doubting correspondent, I am not ashamed to sign my full name. — Marsha van Rhyn, 565 McKenzie Avenue. Marsha van Rhyn, 565 McKenzie Ave.

Privacy Invaded

Referring to the front page illustrated news item of the Million $ Mystery Solved, I consider this an invasion of privacy and a case where a charge of harassment could be laid. Not even the world renowned Irish Sweepstake lottery, which have operated for many, many years, would do such a dastardly news scoop against the expressed wishes of the winner. Henceforth I, for one, will buy no more provincial lottery tickets and hoped many more will likewise refuse to patronize a lottery who insists on such brazen invasion of privacy, and publicity against the expressed wishes of the win-

Many of our legislators are millionaires. Do the newshounds and lottery services ask them what they do with their millions of dollars? Would they not be satisfied with the identity of the winner be ing sworn to by the party's lawyer?

I have a ticket for the September 5, draw, but if I won they can keep the million dollars rather than I be submitted to all this distasteful publicity. Heretofore winners of such prizes have had to move, and move, and move again to escape the dire results of having their names and addresses published. Such publication of names and addresses can do untold hardship and misery. So keep your million dollars. No more provincial lottery tickets for me, nor for those who I persuade to see it my way. Believe me, your so-called mystery winner has my deepest sympathy and support in trying to evade such brazen insolence. Such publicity can make one's life hell. Million dollar winners will soon find that this publicity brings them nothing but trouble.—A Very Concerned Senior Citizen.

Ridiculous Idea

Both Dr. Peter Banks and Mrs. Hilary Young are to be highly commended for their strong advocacy against the building of a new hospital "out in the boondocks" when the need exists right here in town.

Is it not a fact that when the Sisters of St. Ann surrendered their property, facing the General Hospital, for a nominal sum it was with the understanding that an annex to the General would be built there? Which is as it should have been.

Mrs. Young questions the ridiculous no-tion when the medical men of all calibres are against it? Well, Mrs. Young, rumor hath it that the Helmcken site (which cost a bundle) was proffered by a couple of millionaires, at a substantial profit, of course. Premier Bennett could have cir cumvented building out at Helmcken - he still could.

If this unfortunate plan is brought to fruition, I can only hope that this will be borne in mind at the next provincial election. Let's have a government for the peo-ple, all of them, not only for the well-healed. — Bronwyn Jones, Victoria.

Beautiful Tyrants of the Philippines

By MARK GAYN Toronto Star

They are beautiful people, this pair that rules the Philippines. Ferdinand Marcos, 60, and his wife Imelda, in her 50s but looking much younger, are attractive, vital, quick-witted, and obviously having a heap of fun with their absolute power.

Between the two of them, they run this nation of 44 million friendly, industrious and largely very poor people as if it were their personal fief. True, there is a great deal of talk about democracy. The other day, the president even said that "every government should open itself to scrutiny on human rights," and promised to transfer the cases of 4,000-plus detainees

But one need not be in the Philippines very long to discover that Marcos' is a very special kind of democracy - as heavy-handed as almost any in Asia.

Back on September 23, 1972, when police raiding parties spread out to round up Marcos' opponents, the first victims were members of the opposition Liberal party and editors and columnists.

A few hours before Marcos proclaimed his martial law, the land had the freest and liveliest press on the continent. These when a few reappeared, some of the richer ones fell to the president's cronies. Today, the Times-Journal is believed to be owned by Imelda's brother, "Kokoy" Romualdez. The Express is owned by "Bobby" Benedicto, who also controls the profitable TV channels 4, 9 and 13. Both men are the principal fixers for the

Under the martial law, anyone can be jailed, and held indefinitely. According to Marcos, the military prisons today hold only 600 "politicals." Informants in Manila put the figure in the thousands.

Among these detainees, the lean and embittered Benigno Aquino Jr. stands out. After nearly five years behind bars, he is at last on trial. The charge is subversion, including collusion with Communist plotters. But Aquino is no leftist, and his main crime appears to be the fact that in any election, he would probably defeat Marcos. His treatment since that seized has alternated between extreme harshness and what other prisoners call "TV relaxation," when he is allowed to Aquino was not the only one to receive special, personal attention from Marcos. The latter has broken up some of the nagrandees of the 18th century — which opposed him. When the heads of some of these families escaped the net, Marcos went after their sons and grandsons, sometimes with preposterous charges

To give Marcos his due, he has also used martial law to carry out some reforms: He tightened Manila's controls 92 provinces, and thus reduced the graft of the provincial bosses stealing jointly with the local constabulary. He broke up the private armies of the landed barons, and seized more than 400,000 veapons in a land in which the welldressed man never felt his attire complete without a gun stuck behind his belt.
Crime has been reduced, and one can wander about Manila in the dark hours with relative safety. Roads have been laid taxes are collected more efficiently, and the land reforms have shown some modest

But even as discipline has been tightened, the Marcos pair has prospered mightily. The new enlarged family of Marcos and Romualdez (Imelda's family) is now regarded as one of the richest in the land. A notable observer says, foreign company moving into this country, you could not wish for a better silent partner than Imelda or her brother (who is governor of Leyte province).

New, powerful middlemen have appeared on the scene — the fixers for the palace. The most important is Roberto "Bobby" Benedicto, an ex-professor, exbanker and now ambassador to Japan, who seems to be more in evidence in Manila than in Tokyo. Another one is Benjamin "Kokoy" Romualdez, ambassador to Peking, who is seldom seen in China. The two handle confidential problems for the two Marcoses. (When Imelda was in Washington, she wanted to be otographed with President Jimmy When the latter demurred. personal attack on the U.S. ambassado William Sullivan. This was arranged through her brother "Kokov."

New World First Populated by the 'Rejects' of Asia?

By BOYCE RENSBERGER New York Times

The story of early man's arrival in the New World, a once tidy scenario that changed little in 50 years from the view that people first came here 12,000 years ago, has lately become a major issue in archeology, sparking many new claims, questions and con-

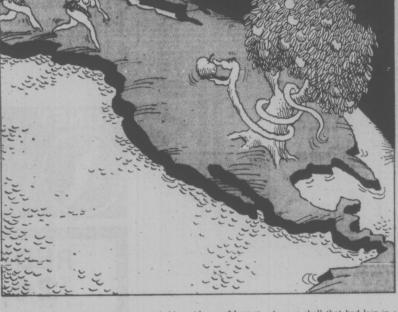

After decades of relatively few major finds, the field has the last five years been thrown wide open by a number of new discoveries. These have led experts to assert, metimes on rather slim reached North America 40,000 years ago or 70,000 years ago as a small band of archeologists on the fringes of nal respectability assert, 120,000 years ago.

One speculation offered by an otherwise conservative archeologist is that the first arrivals in the New World were technologically inferior peoples pushed out of Asia by more advanced cultures. developed on their own to produce the highly sophisticated cultures of the American Indians or, instead, were replaced by later, more advanced immigrants is an

The 12,000-year dogma began in 1932 when scientists found two beautifully sculptured the apparently butchered bones

The mammoth was of a species believed to have died out by 12,000 years ago. In later years the advent of radiocarbon, or carbon-14, dating methods confirmed the estimated age of the original Clovis find. Similar "Clovis point" sites discovered throughout North America also had dates of the same or vounger antiquity. Anthropologists have a tendency to regard the oldest known object as the oldest that ever existed. Intellectually they know better, but the idea that Clovis Man was the earliest American took hold

The first substantial chal-lenge to the 12,000-year dogma came in 1958 with the finding, near Lewisville, Tex., of a few stone tools and some charcoal, said to be from hearths, that years of age. For various technical reasons, the find was not widely accepted as per-human skull that had lain in a museum for decades and reported it to be 48,000 years old. The skull is known as Del Mar man from the town in which it was dug up. Although the dating technique, known as amino acid racemization, generally agrees well with established methods, a number of experts doubt the Del Mar man date because it is so much older than anything else reliably dated.

In 1975, just outisde Pittsburgh, anthropologists found a natural rockshelter containing layer upon layer of evidence of human habitation. The oldest layers dug up so far are nearly years old, by the radiocarbon method.

Because the dating at the ite, called Meadowcroft Rockshelter, is so firmly established and because the site is rich in evidences of human sence, the site establishes with virtual certainty that people had come as far as Pitts-burgh by 19,000 years ago. ause it may have taken date objects older than 40,000 human territory southward and eastward from Alaska, leaders of the Meadowcroft dig have suggested that people arrived in the New World at least 22,000 years ago. Earlier this year another California scientist reported still older evidence of human presence inferred by the radiocarbon method. He found stone tools along with dwarf mammoth bones in what appeared to be charcoal-lined pits on Santa Rosa Island off the coast of Santa Barbara, Ap parently some people, butchered the bull-sized elephants and roasted them in the pits. The charcoal turned out to be older than the limit of carbon-14 method and can only be said to be more than 40,000 years of age. Details of this find have not yet been published for other scientists to examine for possible errors in method or interpretation.

If the Santa Rosa Island site's antiquity is confirmed, it will lend credence to the Del Mar skull's date of 48,000 years. Although a small group found stone tools of vastly greater age, some purported to be over 100,000 years old, none of the finds older than the ones just mentioned are widely ac cepted. The problems with these finds are that the stones are so crudely flaked that natural processes can produce the same effects, and that the dating is based on highly inex-

Followed Herds

The people who migrated from Asia into North America did not know they were doing anything special. During the ice ages, when so much water was locked up as glaciers, sea levels dropped enough to expose a 15-mile-wide bridge across the Bering Straits. It existed as a cold, dry plains environment inhabited by mammoths, musk oxen, caribou and other animals for thousands of vears. The Asians who crossed it were most likely simply following migratory herds or moving away from areas far or ten times as far.

theory is by far the dominant one in the thinking of most anthropologists, experts who have been to the Bering Straits today observe that in winter when the water freezes over walk from one continent to the other. Thus it is possible that the first and subsequent entries into North America could have taken place almost any year in during the ice ages, an ice-free corridor existed and could have funneled early Americans from Alaska through Alberta and into Montana. From there the immigrants could have fanned out to occupy virtually all of the rest of North America and cars our of Manhattan. All cars but mine, that is. As a breather, I am all for air, although as a New Yorker, I am not sure I want it to be too clean.

People in Maine seem to breathe exceedingly clean air without harmful effects to health, but they have been breathing it most of their lives whereas New Yorkers have not. It is conceivable that we have a dangerously low tolerance to high-grade air and that long exposure to the stuff may produce hitherto un-suspected ailments. Almost everything we've been exposed to for the last 30 years seems to be producing hitherto unsuspected ailments these days, and who is to say that high-grade air might not turn out to be just as bad for us as sac-charin, fried eggs or butter fat? * * *

On the other hand, few New Yorkers would want the local air to become much worse. On balance, most of us have adjusted our life expectancies to the present air consistency, recognized that it is eroding us away at a fairly reasonable clip, and geared our lives to get in as much activity as possible before the air finishes

That is one reason New York is such a hectic place. Everybody wants to get in a full lifetime before the air wears him down. If the air gets much worse, we shall have to speed up to a pace that will enable us to cram 70 years of living into 30 or 35 years, and New York would probably fly to pieces under the strain of the acceleration.

This is why the parking ban in Manhat-tan ought to be repealed immediately. The clean-air people who persuaded the courts to order the ban have the best of intenbut they don't understand what they

Very logical. The trouble is that the clean-air people are not dealing with a logical situation. They are dealing with the relationship between people and automobiles, which is entirely irrational. If they had paid any attention to the parking scene in New York, they would have foreseen the disaster potential in the pre-

To begin with, parking in Manhattan has always been impossible. If reason affected people behind steering wheels, New Yorkers would have given up cars years ago and outsiders would have stopped driv-ing into the city. They didn't.

What they did do was start warping their lives to pursue the hunt for the impossible parking space. And so, at all hours of the day and night, you see maniacally single-minded motorists slow-the streets in search of a few ly cruising the streets in search of a few

It would be useful to know what quantity of New York's air pollution is caused by the emissions of these indomitable parking-space hunters. It is not the parked car, after all, that is poisoning the air, but the car prowling forever in search of quiet haven at the impossible curb.

It is a New York custom when impossibility is conceded to double-park the machine and leave the engine running with blinker lights flashing, thus pumping more noxious gases into the city. How much more effective for the cause of clean air to provide more parking spaces so that these fume pumpers might be suppressed. * * *

TORONTO (CP) — Operation Identification, billed as a deterrent to would-be thieves, is starting to catch on in the Ontario construction industry.

The Toronto—Construction Association has recently adopted the anti-theft security program, following the lead of program, following the lead of its Ottawa counterpart. With its invisible-marking pencils, electric engravers, numbered die stampe and special labels, Operation Iden-tification is designed to help police and others identify stolen property and trace it back to its owner.

"Every year, millions of dollars worth of supplies, ma-dollars worth of supplies, ma-terials and equipment are sto-len from construction sites and businesses," said Don Giffin, president of the Toron-to association.

"Now we finally have a good system to cut into the serious losses. From tools to tractors and office equipment.—all can be marked and pro-tected.

"It's a system long overdue in the industry." Each construction firm registering with Operation Iden-tification is assigned a special code number with nine digits based on the social security number concept.

The code number can idencode can be checked by com-

Sockeye Salmon Fishing Opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Fraser River and the Gulf Islands will be reopened to net salmon fishermen from 4 p.m. oday until 8 a.m. Friday, the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission decided Transfast.

Tuesday.

The fishery, rich with a record run of Stuart Lake sockeye, was closed earlier this week to assure an adequate escapement of replace-tor of the commission, said that about 340,000 fish should have escaped when fishing resumes today and an addi-tional 60,000 should go through during the weekend to provide the necessary 400,000 spawners.

The fishery in United States waters will be open to gillnetters and seiners on Thursday.
Roos said there is no reason during openings in the past two weeks.

Canadian boats have taken Canadian boats have taken about 357,000 of the 930,000 salmon caught to date. Canada is entitled to half the catch. About 120,000 of the U.S. catch has been taken by native Indians, entitled by a federal court ruling to half the U.S. share. Roos said it is a normal sit-uation for the U.S. to be ahead at this point because the Canadians catch more Thanks again.

I leaned back in my seat while the engines roared readying for takeoff and I thought again of the happy little things that made my brief visit to London memorable. Of an elderly busker, who vividly told a story of a world championship boxing fight and played his harmonica on Oxford Street; and of that little old lady of 91 who cheered up the crowd at Hyde Park's Speakers Corner by cracking jokes and leading a singalong, typifying that precious sense of humor of the British that has survived despite all that has survived despite all their hardships.

The plan of the committee

The plan of the committee is to focus on getting the government to change her mind.

In the event the service is cancelled, the committee will urge Washington State to apply for U.S. federal funding, which is available, to keep a private ferry service going for a brief period of time, possibly up to 18 months.

This is the time needed to permit Washington to complete construction of new ferries ordered by the governor.

Concerned for Salmon? Read Latest UVic Book

Pacific Salmon Management for People, the latest in a series of publications by the geography department at the University of Victoria, should be included in the library of anyone concerned with the viability of our fisheries resource.

The 320-page book, which costs $4, isn't for casual read-

But it contains much food for serious thought.

One particularly interesting item, gleaned from the submissions of 13 contributing scientists which have been blended together into a cohesive whole by editor Derek Ellis, concerns recreational fisheries.

And for those interested in fishing as a quality experience rather than merely a meat-gathering excursion, Philip Meyer of the federal fisheries department paints a rather gloomy fu-

"The salmon recreator in British Columbia will demand

"The salmon recreator in British Columbia will demand continuation in the quality of salmon recreational opportunities available to him," states Meyer.

He adds that the sport salmon fisherman will attempt to maintain or even improve upon the current success rate while seeking quiet natural settings in which to escape the fast pace of modern life.

"It is possible he will be successful," says Meyer, "but it is not likely, for his numbers will more than double before the turn of the century.

the turn of the century.

"The Pacific Salmonid Enhancement Program will keep pace with this demand for fifteen to twenty years. But the marine areas and river valleys of the province will not double, and pressures associated with man's other needs will continue to erode natural opportunities.

'It is possible that awareness of man's finite resource base will bring some eventual slackening in pressure, but this can not be expected for some time."

Meyer submits motives such as "to take it easy" and "to be outdoors" have gradually eroded the traditional fisherman's aim of merely acquiring fish.

But that doesn't mean that sport fish abundance is unimof effort adjacent to urban areas is relatively poor.

"A proper response to the recreational needs of sport fishermen will thus involve protection and enhancement of

OUTDOORS stewart lang

sports fish stocks, but equally important, attention to a broader range of satisfactions."

Meyer also comes up with a few interesting figures regarding the relative monetary value of the sport salmon resource, a concept guaranteed to raise the hackles of strict purists but one that nevertheless must be applied when dealing with questions of alternate use.

He estimates, "extrapolating coastwide," an annual value of $550 million for both salmon recreational values and stock preservation values.

"It is this value that must be confronted when contemplating irreversible damage to salmon stocks and/or habitat," adds Meyer.

Market values associated with recreational fishing are also substantial.

"A recent study estimated the value of the current recreational boating fleet in coastal British Columbia to be $450 million and that expenditure on replacement and repair of recreational boats, together with boating equipment, likely reaches $100 million annually. Eighty-six per cent of these boaters indicated sport fishing to be a major motivation for recreational boat use."

And that's only one sharter in this threshet resolution. And that's only one chapter in this thought-provoking

Others are a shade more optimistic and outline both the problems facing salmon and people in this province and the possible solutions.

The book may be obtained from the UVic book stor when a new order comes in during the next couple of weeks or by writing the Department of Geography, University of Victoria, P.O. Box 1700, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2Y2.

Times Ottawa Bureau OTTAWA — Canada is considering resuming uranium shipments to West Germany and other European countries on an "interim basis" pending the outcome of discussions going on between Canada and Euratom.

West German Chancellor
Helmut Schmidt made this known at his press conference here Tuesday following two day of talks with Prime Minister Trudeau and members of the Canadian cabinet.

Euratom is the EEC nuclear agency.

If the Canadian government can be satisfied that the study now being made by expensions. perts of the seven countries who participated in the Lonsummit conference in May will come up with some-thing of value, the shipments may be resumed on an interim basis.

The outcome of the provisional study is not expected until late next month.

Prime Minister Trudeau and his cabinet will have to make the evaluation of the provisional study and decide if progress can be made towards meeting the prime objectives.

Those objectives are avoiding the proliferation of nu-clear weapons, the capacity for manufacturing such weapons while at the same time providing uranium for energy.

The ambassadors of the

Rubbing Alcohol Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Downtown Eastside Residents Association isn't happy with the response it's getting from a Perth, Ont. rubbing alcohol manufacturer, says DERA vice-president Bruce Eriksen.

DERA wants a list of the largest Vancouver distributors of Wampole Ltd. rubbing alcohol so it can investigate whether the distributors are selling to kid road alcoholics. Wampole has refused to give them the list.

"We just do not give out a list of distributors," Wampole president Ed Danner said in a telephone interview. "We don't think that we're entitled to do that. Danner said the company will, however, search its records for distributors who are selling more rubbing alco-

Housewives Flock to Support Flora's Pension Battle Plan

tive MP Flora MacDonald says she has been getting calls from across the country in the last few days offering to support a court challenge to the Canada Pension Plan on the basis that it discriminates against housewives.

Miss MacDonald, who represents the riding of Kingstonand-the-Islands, said in the Commons last week during a debate on amendments to the CPP that she wanted to find a housewife willing to challenge the law.

She said the CPP, which does not allow some 4.5 million housewives to contribute to it, violates the basic premises of human rights legisla-tion recently passed in the Commons. It denied equal opportunity to these housewives.

Disgruntled Employees Threat To Air Safety, McKenzie Says

Times Ottawa Bureau Canada flights will be adversely affected by the discontent of 2,600 English-speaking employees of the airline in Montreal who want transfers to other provinces, MP Dan McKenzie (PC-Winnipeg South Centre) charged last

The claim was disputed vigorously by Marcel Roy (Laval), parliamentary secretary to the transport minister, who said the airline knows of only 325 employees at the Montreal maintenance facility who want to leave Quebec.

McKenzie said he had been told by employees during a visit to Air Canada facilities in Montreal earlier in the day that "there's no way we can operate the national airline under safe or efficient condi-

Laetrile Seen as Miracle Cure Despite Medical Evidence

By JOHN WALLACE: CHICAGO (Reuter) — The mounting controversy over the mysterious substance called laetrile reaches far beyond the question of proper medical treatment of dying cancer victims—the public has never given up the notion of the "miracle drug."

The American medical community is nearly unanimous in the opinion that laetrile is junk, that proponents of the drug are out to profit from the misery of the cancer pa-

Yet thousands of persons, perceiving the ultimate weap-on in the seemingly endless battle against cancer, are demanding the right to use lae-trile and rejecting govern-ment sanctions against it.

State legislatures through-out the United States have been responding to this call for "freedom of choice" by ignoring federal laws and lega-lizing not only laetrile but other substances whose effectiveness is unproved, whose safety is uncertain.

fered to explain the efficacy of laetrile: first, that it had an affinity for cancer cells and killed them through re-lease of hydrogen cyanide; second, that cancer is caused by a vitamin deficiency which is corrected through use of laetrile, also known as "vi-tamin B-17."

Scientists laughed off the first theory, although they readily admitted that the powerful poison hydrogen cyanide is certainly contained in the laetrile compound. To the second theory, the reply is that there simply is no such thing as vitamin E-17.

But the question remains: if one is dying of cancer, why not try anything?

This is the question Opal Dehart of Trinity, N.C., put when she reached President Carter during a national tele-phone callin at the White House in March.

Her father was dying, she said, and: "I realize that the American Medical Association (AMA) says it (laetrile) is not proved safe, but for a termi-nal patient who is not going to live-and has a chance to live with it-I don't see how it could be dangerous."

Broiled Chicken, with a Taste of Italy

Chicken is so good, so appetizing and so easy and fast to prepare that it pays to have a whole pile of chicken recipes up your sleeve.

The best thing about chicken is that it is included in just about every international cuisine, so one can go around the world in chicken recipes, including one of my favorites from Italy. And of all the very fine Italian recipes for chick-en, I find it just about impos-sible to beat Pollo alla Diavo-la, which I translate to Broiled Deviled Chicken.

really superior Italian dish, using chicken parts that I believe to be best suited to North Americans.

BROILED DEVILLED CHICKEN

Most original recipes for this dish call for quartering a chicken, with the idea of creating four servings. How-ever I just don't like the back section of a quartered chicken and so I use instead legs and thighs in one piece. This also allows exaponing the dish to more than four diners. It costs a bit more, but not THAT much more. However I will give this recipe for four people, and it is a very simple matter to increase or reduce the ingredients for more or less.

Melt ¼ pound of butter and mix it with two the olive oil and ¼ tsp dried red peppers in a small bowl.

In another bowl mix together ½ cup finely chopped onions, two the chopped fresh parsley and two cloves of garlic finely chopped. Add four tsp of the oil-butter-pepper mix to the onion, parsley, gar-lic mix and stir in thoroughly.

Switch on the broiler and set your rack so the meat is about five inches from the heat source.

Wash the chicken in cold wash the chicken in cold water, pat dry with towelling and putting it out on the broiler pan, brush with the butter-oil mixture, dust lightly with salt and pop into the oven. (If using chicken quarters start the cooking with the skin side down.)

After five minutes baste the chicken again with the oil-butter mix and from now on use the juices in the broiler pan as the basting mix. After five more minutes, baste the chicken and turn it over onto the other side, baste again and lightly dust with

From this point baste every five minutes with the juices in the pan—the chicken will take about 15 minutes to cook.

Now take the parsley, onion and garlic mixture—it should be in the form of a coarse paste and carefully spread it out over the top of the chicken, patting it into place. Put the chicken under the broiler again and watching so that it doesn't burn, carefully brown this coating layer. Transfer the pieces of chicken to a heated serving plate, and spoon the pan juices all over.

This is really a very simple recipe, little more than a sim-ple broiled chicken dish, but the extra touches make for a delightful flavor treat and a very rich dish.

Because it is rich I prefer to go very simple with the rest of the meal—say, carefully poached spinach and some crusty Italian bread with cheese and fruit to follow.

For a wine to really add the finishing touch, I choose a fine bottle of Italian dry red—

Getting Enough Zinc in Diet Is Mainly a Question of Taste

and ZAK SABRY

Last week we devoted the first of two columns to the subject of zinc. In recent years, nutrition scientists from Vanderbilt and Wayne State Universities described cases of serious zinc defi-ciency in Egypt and Iran and researchers from the Univer-sity of Colorado pointed out the possibility of zinc shortages in some parts of the United States. As a result, there has been concerted research effort made to learn more about this mineral.

One of zinc's important functions is to affect our sense of taste. Researchers at Georgetown University have found that there is a protein in our saliva which depends on zinc for its ability to affect the start back. When we are our taste buds. When we are short of zinc, that protein does not function properly. As a result, we lose the ability to activate certain taste buds, certain foods become disagreeable and we lose our ap-

This could have serious consequences. We could conceivably drop foods that contain ing effects. For example, one of the most serious complica-tions that affects many cancer patients is the loss of appetite. Without the ability to eat a good, balanced diet, the patient is at a disadvan-tage trying to fight a vigor-ously growing tumor.

The research group at Georgetown University suggest that the loss of appetite in cancer patients is due to the rapid growth of a tumor which requires a large supply of zinc. The cancer depletes the body's reserves of this precious mineral. The saliva precious is therefore denrived. protein is therefore deprived of zinc and cannot activate certain taste buds and probably interferes with the func-tion of others. cancer patients lose the taste for meat, which is the provider of the zinc they need

There is need for a lot more research before we can use this information in the treatment of diseases such as cancer. This kind of research is going on in a number of laboratories around the world and we are sure to hear and learn more about zinc and other trace minerals.

In the meantime we have to Chances are many of us do Chances are many of us do. Zinc is found in many foods, particularly the unrefined ones, such as meat, liver, eggs, seafood (especially oysters), milk and wholegrain breads of cereals (many times more than in white value of processed and fresh pack baby carrot (or mini-carrot) products imported into Canada is increasing at such a rate that over the last two years, Agriculture Canada has been contributing heavily to the cost of a research project concerning the production and marketing of baby (mini) carrots.

Frozen baby carrots both for the retail and the institu-tional market are now being introduced in Canada. But the largest part of the market for baby carrots may well be the fresh pack product which has strong consumer acceptance.

Researchers for the project carried out at Sherrington. carried out at Sherrington. Que., explained the difficulty of defining fresh baby carrots of a specific size and length whereas a smaller size is preferred by the processing in-production is feasible then imports could be replaced and this would contribute new income to the Ontario vegetable industry." There are still problems with regards to a proper field production system, and in plant handling, and processing of this unique carrot crop. While research on these carrots at Agric on these carrots at Agricul-turer Canada's station at St. Jean, Que., will be winding down, work will continue in Ontario at Harrow and at the provincial station in Simcoe. Dear Miss J.:

The problem of uncontrollable, localized sweating is a source of enormous distress to a great many people. All of them have tried, as you un-that it is perfectly dry expose them have tried, as you undoubtedly have, all the antiperspirants on the market; without success. This, despite the fact that so many millions of people benefit by the use of these products.

Recently, I came across an article written by Dr. Walter B. Shelley of the Department of Dermatology at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. The article, printed in the medical magazine, Consultant, outlined a form of treatment which deserves to be tried by you and others with this problem.

Dr. Shelley prescribes a 20 per cent aluminum chloride, hexahydrate, in absolute, anydrous ethyl alcohol (200 per cent). This should be made up by the pharmacist exactly as Dr. Shelley suggests, without any variation. He warns especially that this preparation should NOT be compounded with "95 per cent ethyl alco-

Dr. Shelley suggests that the patient apply a small amount of the formula by rubbing it into the exact area in which the heavy sweating occurs.

He says, "Do not wash the the area to a hair dryer.

The patient should repeat application of the anti-perspirant every night until the relief from sweating is achieved. After that, it can be continued two or three times a week as needed. "This acidic aluminum solution has no effect on nylon, but is severely damaging to cottons.

Before embarking on such a project for the control of excessive sweating, your own doctor should, of course, be

Normally, declarer's atti-tude in a trump contract is to view his own hand as the suview his own hand as the supreme one, and the dummy hand as the secondary, or supplementary one. When he looks over his losing tricks, he usually does so from the viewpoint of his own hand. And in the great majority of deals, the latter approach is the correct one.

But there are certain types of situations in which declarer's hand should be viewed as the secondary holding of the partnership. If it seems proper to view dummy as the declarer, to transpose yourself to thinking in terms of the exposed hand as being the declarer, then you must do so. The type of play referred to is known as the "dummy reversal," in which Smith's basic premise, for the current court action and all his other battles with the government, is that his chunk of the Yukon was never prop-erly ceded by King Charles II in 1670 to the Hudson's Bay Company. Consequently, the HBC was unable to cede it back to the Crown after confederation in 1867. As a result, the nothern Yukon isn't legal-ly port of Canada, though it be a British Crown colony of some sort.

The reason: Nobody knew the northern Yukon existed when the HBC got its original charter, and that charter gave the HBC title to lands as far west as the "stoney mountains." Old Crow and environs are considerably west of the mountains.

Another argument he raises is that the Yuntut Kutchin never signed any treaties surrendering their aboriginal title to the Canadian govern-ment or any other govern-ment. Nobody bothered to ask

Zoo Developed For Scientists

By JACK STILLMAN

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga.

(AP) — The national Centre for Disease Control (CDC) is raising more than 20,000 animals, from rhesus monkeys to dogs, goats and sheep, on 90 acres of rolling pasture outside Atlanta.

It's one of the biggest and most unusual animal collections anywhere, and the public's not invited. The animals will be used in CDC research.

It all began about 10 years ago. The CDC was using between 500 and 800 rhesus monkeys a year in research, importing the animals from India, where they were plentiful.

Then about four years ago, the Indian government decided a shortage of rhesus monkeys was developing and exports were reduced. The CDC began raising monkeys of its own.

began raising monkeys of its own.

Today, there are 28 species of animals in the CDC's breeding section. Dr. Sam Adams, who's in charge of the section, said the CDC has nearly 300 monkeys, 5,000 rabits, 4,000 guinea pigs, 10,000 rats, 150 goats, 60 sheep and 200 dogs—mostly beagles—as well as chickens, geese and turkeys.

Although many types of animals may be used in laboratory experiments, monkeys are required for certain types of research.

"So much research work

"So much research work "So much research work can be done with other species of laboratory animals, but when you try to approximate human medicine—and man—rhesus monkeys are more similar than other species," said Adams.

The breeding and holding compound has 65 employees and everyone who is exposed to rabies is required to take the prescribed shots and the necessary boosters.

Elaborate precautions are taken to keep the animals themselves disease-free. Many are given measles vac-cinations and are tested for tuberculosis. Workers enter-ing holding areas for the smaller animals must change clothes and pass through a shower.

Acting Victoria Mayor Bill Tindall indicated today he can't take seriously an Esquimalt alderman's suggestion that Victoria West join the municipality of Esquimalt.

"It would be more realistic and practical to suggest that Victoria absorb Esquimalt, for geographic and financial reasons," Tindall said.

He was referring to a pro-posal by Ald. Larry Mann, who said an option of View Royal residents to join an incorporation of Western Communities is for View Royal to join Esquimalt instead.

The union of View Royal and Esquimalt is a subject that has been discussed intermittently for many years and was a recommendation of the 1965 Bracewell report on amalgamation.

Mann went on to say "if we want to be logical about mu-nicipal boundaries, it might be a good idea to also have

Air Traffic Controller Talks Stall

OTTAWA (CP) — Contract talks for the country's 2,200 air traffic controllers appear to have reached an impasse says Jim Livingston, pres-ident of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association.

Livingston said in an interview that if final conciliation efforts fail, a strike could be legally called as early as August. But, he said, he still has hopes a settlement can be

The CATCA president said a final conciliation meeting is set for next Monday and he expected the conciliation report by July 25.

The main obstacle to an agreement is a new classification system for controllers, Livingston said. Wages and the bilingualism issue are other items still to be settled but they are less troublesome, he CATCA staged walkouts in several cities last summer to protest federal policy on bilin-gualism in air traffic control. Pilots joined the protest and helped tie up domestic air

Montrealer Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) - Michael Timothy Spankie, 17, arrested in Montreal Monday, has been charged in Van-mi-automatic pistol.

This problem now is being studied by a federally-appointed inquiry commission and is not directly involved in the contract talks.

But the union has demanded in negotiations that it be consulted on changes planned by the transport department on bilingual communications.
CATCA is seeking an eight per cent increase in wages and fringe benefits in a one-year contract retroactive to Gerry Joseph Cool, 30, and Gary Joseph Lord, 29, were charged after the incident with attempted murder, two counts of robbery and two counts of possession of weapons — a .357-calibre magnum revolver and a .38-calibre seyear contract retroactive to last Dec. 31, Livingston said. That is the maximum under

Anti-Inflation Board guide-

The union is also arguing exempt from AIB guides.

However, the main problem is the classification system, unchanged since 1967, he said. "That's the one that's going to make it or break it."

Controllers are graded under the system and that affects their wages. CATCA and the government have been working on new classification standards for two years.

"We have 99 per cent agreement on the makeup of the new standards and 85 per cent agreement on how they should be interpreted and applied," he said. The final items were proving tough to resolve.

Car Thieves Start Young

Oak Bay and Victoria police believe two boys about 12 tried to steal three cars in south Oak Bay before they successfully drove off in a fourth early Tuesday.

A car taken from 195 Sunny Lane was recovered nine blocks away in Victoria, on Lawndale, where a resident saw two boys leave it.

Attemtps were made on cars at 299 and 309 King George, and at 129 Beach.
